

Department of Environmental Engineering – University of Western Macedonia

NAME:	Dimos Dimoulas
Specialization/Position held:	Professor of English Language and Literature/Adjunct Instructor
Short CV:	Dimos Dimoulas holds a PhD from the School of English, Aristotle University, Greece. His thesis examined the representation of the Occupation and the Civil War in Greek films of the period 1946-1989. He studied English Language & literature (2003) and Greek Literature (2009) at the Aristotle University of Thessalonik. He received his MA in European Literature and Culture from the Faculty of Philosophy, Aristotle University (2007). Alongside holding a permanent position as a state school teacher of English Language since 2006, Dimoulas has been an adjunct instructor at the Faculty of Engineering, University of Western Macedonia, Greece. He has also worked as adjunct lecturer at a number of universities, uncluding Aristotle Univerity of Thessaloniki, Democritus University of Thrace and School of Pedagogical and Technological Education. His research focuses on film in the post-Civil War contect, memory politics in the Greek cinema and screen representation of trauma and violence. Dimoulas has published the books: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Englistoria: English through the study of history. Thessaloniki: Epikentro, 2011. 2. Englistoria: English through the study of history vol. II. Thessaloniki: Epikentro, 2012. 3. Technical English for Engineers. Thessaloniki: Epikentro, 2017. 	